Join Me On Facebook

As often as possible, I send out real-time updates from Washington, D.C., or from around the Seventh District of Georgia. Facebook provides the opportunity to share information with you both quickly and economically. It also provides a great way for you to engage in the kind of dialogue that helps move our nation forward. These updates are as concise as possible while providing information on the latest bills I've co-sponsored or supported, links to press releases, reports, and videos.

Please consider "liking" my Facebook page and join the conversation. Below is a snapshot of my Facebook page so you can see for yourself what kind of information is available to you. Don't miss out—click here to "like" my Facebook page.

Next Week In Washington...

We are finishing up the last couple of days of this April district work period. I have had a full calendar these past two weeks consisting largely of visits to various civic organizations around the district. For example, I have spoken with multiple Kiwanis and Rotary clubs, where constituent feedback has been fantastic. Oftentimes, the two best days of voting in Congress are the day before Members leave for a district work period and the day they return from one. It is constituent-driven clarity that makes it so.

Next week will be no different. While the schedule is not set in stone, the House will likely take up a short-term transportation funding bill. I, along with many conservative freshmen Members, are going to be advocating for a long-term funding bill as opposed to a short-term proposal. We know, as our constituents have conveyed, that a short term funding solution leaves us with the same problem that is crippling so many American businesses today...uncertainty. We have heard this message and we will be in the trenches impressing upon other Members in the House the need for certainty that comes with long-term fiscal proposals. In addition, the House will take up House Majority Leader Eric Cantor's bill, The Small Business Tax Cut Act \(H.R. 9\). This piece of tax reform will allow for domestic small businesses to deduct 20% of either their qualified domestic business income, or their taxable income for the taxable year. While this bill does not provide the necessary level of reform as the FairTax does, it is a good bill that merits Congress' consideration.

This office belongs to you, and I encourage you to use it. You may decide that next Saturday is simply too long to wait to share your thoughts, in which case please do not hesitate to reach out. Please know that I remain committed to you that will work every day to reclaim the freedoms that have slowly eroded over time. If we remain united in our efforts, we will succeed, even if it is just one fiber of freedom at a time.

Sincerely,

Rob Woodall
